INTRODUCTION

In every state, anyone who sells a pesticide product within the state must register that product and pay a registration fee. This is a requirement for both manufacturers and distributors of all pesticides, including antimicrobial products such as disinfectants, sanitizers and germicides. In general, distributors who sell private label products are responsible for paying the state fees. Distributors who sell national brand products are advised to check with the product manufacturer or supplier to ensure that the product is registered appropriately with the state.

Since our last update, please note that Arizona, Kansas, and Virginia have changed their registration fees. Massachusetts has switched their registration system which has impacted the renewal deadline and late fees for this year only. Guam's information could not be updated.

Almost all states have a discontinuation policy that requires registrants to continue to pay annual registration fees upon the cancellation of a registration. Most states require such fees to be paid for a 1-2 year period after registration is canceled.

Further, many states continue to increase their enforcement actions for registration violations. Stiff penalties, including substantial fines and jail time, remain a reality. In fact, ISSA was told by a number of states that pesticide registration enforcement will once again be a "high priority" in 2019-20.

We have retained our traditional format to provide the information in a consistent and user-friendly manner. This survey provides you with a listing of all pesticide registration fees, renewal dates, penalties for selling unregistered pesticides, and state registration authority references. To obtain the necessary information for registering your product in a particular state, simply contact the listed state agency. Please note that, once again, this year we have provided e-mail addresses for appropriate state agency contact individuals.

Note: This manual is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information of a general nature. It is not intended to convey legal advice that is suitable in all circumstances. Because liability may result from company conduct found to be unlawful, readers are encouraged to seek legal or other expert advice before applying general principle to specific situations.
